ADVANCE REVIEWS:QUESTIONABLY EVER AFTER + WINDOW SHOPPING FOR LASTING LOVE

'I have had the privilege of sharing Zohra's vision in working with her as a dramaturge on these two productions. She spent countless hours creating, developing and researching these socio-dramas which explore difficult multicultural topics. It takes commitment and courage when trying to heal cultural wounds or sociological scars. This is evident through the two plays that have resulted from that dedication and have triggered ongoing healthy dialogue.'

Reva Stern, dramaturge, and author of The Water Buffalo that Shed her Girdle

'Through her plays Zohra is raising social awareness of our multicultural community, promoting better understanding of family health and presenting solutions to resolve their conflicts. At the same time she is trying to bring down walls of ignorance and prejudice to build bridges of caring and compassion.'

Dr. K. Sohail, Psychotherapist, Humanist, and Author

Zoberi makes no apologies about her feelings surrounding arranged marriages! She's the product of one. To help dispel the myths surrounding the custom, and to have some laughs along the way, Zoberi penned the light-hearted play Window Shopping...for lasting love? (Pros and cons of arranged and love marriages from a multicultural perspective).
